1. Cable Color Cable Color is one of the largest telecommunications companies in Honduras, providing internet, television, and data transport services. While primarily a service provider, they are involved in fiber optic infrastructure and may supply or install fiber optic cables for local networks in the Central and Northern regions of Honduras, particularly in FTTH (Fiber to the Home) deployments (Cable Color website) . 2. LatamFiberHome LatamFiberHome is a leading fiber optic cable manufacturer in Latin America with operations in Honduras. They produce a variety of optical fiber cables, including ADSS (All-Dielectric Self-Supporting) cables, Drop Cables, and DUCT Cables. Their facilities offer advanced R&D testing, OTDR performance verification, and environmental stress testing from -40°C to 70°C, ensuring high reliability and compliance with international standards (LatamFiberHome website) . 3. Trade Platforms and Other Suppliers Platforms like Trademo list multiple fiber manufacturers and suppliers in Honduras, providing shipment details, trade volumes, and global trading partners. These platforms are useful for identifying additional local manufacturers, evaluating their export activity, and connecting with verified contacts for business opportunities (Trademo website) .

Trade and Export Insights

Honduras exports fiber optic cables globally, with 56 shipments recorded between April 2024 and March 2025. Key importing countries include Ukraine, the United States, and Hong Kong, while top exporters to Honduras are Vietnam, China, and Ukraine. This indicates that while Honduras has local manufacturing capabilities, it also participates in international trade for fiber optic cables (Volza data) .

Summary

Honduras has a growing fiber optic cable manufacturing sector, with Cable Color and LatamFiberHome as notable players. For sourcing or partnerships, trade intelligence platforms like Trademo and Volza provide detailed shipment and supplier data, helping businesses identify reliable manufacturers and explore export opportunities. These companies offer a range of products suitable for telecommunications, industrial, and infrastructure projects.
