Key Takeaways

The installation cost of polymer cable trays in Nepal typically ranges from NPR 1,200 to NPR 2,500 per meter, depending on size, complexity, and labor.Cost Factors
• Material Type: Polymer (PVC or FRP) trays are generally cheaper than stainless steel but more expensive than basic GI trays. They are corrosion-resistant and lightweight, making them suitable for humid or chemical-prone environments .

• Tray Dimensions: Width, height, and thickness affect both material and installation costs. Standard widths range from 100mm to 600mm, and thicknesses from 1.6mm to 3mm for lightweight polymer trays .

• Project Complexity: Installation in industrial plants, telecom centers, or commercial buildings may require bends, supports, and accessories, increasing labor costs .

• Accessories: Couplers, bends, tees, and brackets add to the total cost. Polymer trays often require specialized fasteners compatible with the material.

• Labor Charges: Skilled labor in Nepal typically charges NPR 300–700 per meter for installation, depending on accessibility and project scale.
Price Estimate
• Material Cost: NPR 800–1,500 per meter for polymer cable trays.

• Installation Cost: NPR 400–1,000 per meter, including supports and accessories.

• Total Cost: NPR 1,200–2,500 per meter for a complete installed system.
Additional Considerations
• Polymer trays are lightweight, corrosion-resistant, and easy to install, which can reduce long-term maintenance costs compared to metal trays .

• For large-scale projects, bulk procurement may reduce material costs.

• Local suppliers in Nepal, such as Vaishno Storage, Spangle Steel, and Brilltech Engineers, can provide custom sizes and installation services, though polymer-specific options may need to be confirmed . For accurate pricing, it is recommended to request a quotation from local suppliers, specifying tray dimensions, length, and installation requirements.
