Key Takeaways

Perforated screens for distribution boxes typically range from $20 to $150 per sheet or panel, depending on material, size, and perforation pattern.

Factors Affecting Price
• Material: Stainless steel is more expensive than aluminum or mild steel due to corrosion resistance and durability, while aluminum is lighter and moderately priced ( ).

• Sheet Size and Thickness: Larger or thicker sheets increase cost. Standard industrial panels for distribution boxes often range from 12"x12" to 24"x24", with thicknesses from 0.5 mm to 2 mm.

• Perforation Pattern and Aperture Size: Round, square, or slotted holes, as well as the percentage of open area, influence both performance and price. Finer perforations or higher open area percentages generally cost more due to precision manufacturing ( ).

• Customization: Custom sizes or patterns for specific distribution boxes can increase cost compared to standard off-the-shelf panels ( ).

• Supplier and Location: Prices vary by supplier and region. Online marketplaces like Alibaba, Amazon, and McMaster-Carr offer factory-direct or retail options, with bulk orders often reducing per-unit cost ( ).
Typical Price Ranges
• Small standard panels (aluminum, 12"x12"): $20–$40 each ( ).

• Medium panels (stainless steel, 18"x18"): $50–$100 each ( ).

• Large or custom panels (stainless steel, 24"x24" or custom perforation): $100–$150+ each ( ).
Purchasing Tips
• Compare material and thickness to balance durability and cost.

• Check open area percentage to ensure proper ventilation or filtration for your distribution box.

• Consider bulk orders from verified suppliers to reduce unit cost ( ).

• Verify delivery options and lead times, especially for custom perforated screens.

By considering these factors, you can select a perforated screen that meets both functional requirements and budget constraints for your distribution boxes.
