Key Takeaways

The purchase price of Dutch steel cable trays varies by type, size, and supplier, with bulk pricing typically available upon request.

Dutch steel cable trays, including ladder, wire mesh, trough, and basket types, are widely used in industrial, commercial, and marine applications for cable management . Prices depend on material (e.g., stainless steel AISI 304), dimensions (lengths from 3,000 mm, widths 25–600 mm, heights 25–125 mm), and load capacity . Custom sizes or heavy-duty versions may increase costs. For bulk purchases, suppliers often provide tiered pricing based on order volume, with minimum order quantities (MOQs) and sample requirements for technical evaluation . Exact prices are generally not listed publicly and must be obtained by contacting suppliers directly.

How to Obtain Pricing
• Contact Dutch suppliers such as CC Nederland B.V. or Gouda Holland for quotes on stainless steel or coated trays .

• Specify tray type, dimensions, and quantity to receive accurate pricing.

• Request bulk order discounts if purchasing multiple units or containers.

• Check online marketplaces like Google Shopping for comparative pricing and supplier options .
Additional Considerations
• Stainless steel trays offer higher corrosion resistance and durability, which may increase the unit price .

• Coated or galvanized trays are generally more cost-effective but may have lower chemical or marine resistance .

• Installation accessories, covers, and fasteners may add to the total purchase cost .
In summary, while exact prices vary, Dutch steel cable trays are typically priced per unit or per meter, with bulk discounts available. Contacting suppliers directly with your specifications is the most reliable way to obtain current purchase prices.
